

Heading in the right direction.

Most of the older people you meet are complete flossers. The 'advice' you are given is often tainted with regret or self-interest or is irrelevant. You can only get so far searching on the net. It gives you the information but not how to act on it. How do you actually decide what to do next with your ideas, ambitions and intentions?

You could try coming to raadzaak.com

We have asked real people with knowledge and experience to register on the site. People who give their advice for free just so everything they have learned won't go to waste.

What's in it for us, the site owners? We felt it a good idea and we'll enjoy seeing it work. If we get advertising revenues later, that'd be great but we're not banking on it.

We hope it proves useful. But give us a little time to get more people on it. Don't expect miracles straight off. Then let us know what you think.

Thanks.
